THE CHOSEN ONE In what is generally considered a bold, tradition-breaking choice, President Aquino appointed Maria Lourdes Sereno Chief Justice. They flash their winning smiles after her oath-taking at Rizal Hall of Malacañang on Saturday. Her appointment was hailed by many in legal circles and parodied in cyberspace, where netizens joked that Sereno will still be chief justice when Jesus returns for the Second Coming.

HARDLY a sour note was heard.

Various legal, business and political sectors, public and private groups yesterday hailed the appointment of Supreme Court Associate Justice Maria Lourdes Sereno as the first female Chief Justice of the Philippines.

"It's a tough job. But like they say, when you want the best man for the job, pick a woman," said Sen. Pia Cayetano.

Sen. Miriam Defensor-Santiago said she doubted that Sereno would allow herself to be controlled by the President.

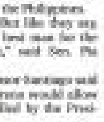

"If the charge is that she is just going to be a presidential puppet or marionette, I'm sure that Ms Sereno will soon prove her critics to be wrong," Santiago said.

Sofia's choice: It's triathlon over cancer for spunky girl, 9

By Francis T.J. Ochoa

SOFIA Daniella Ildefonso looks at the huge red timer at the edge of the pool as it ticks to zero. She holds on to the gutter, one leg pushing against the wall like an explosive start waiting to happen. When zero hits, she tears off in an instant, sunburnt limbs knifing through water with boundless energy.

Her coach—who earlier sternly explained that he brought a large timer to training session because he wanted Sofia to learn to take note of her times—breaks into a wide smile and tells the girl's father: "She's good. She has the potential to be a champion."

Bidding opens for rehab of 4 major river basins

By DJ Yap

THE DEPARTMENT of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) has opened the bidding for a P57-million contract for consultants that will draw up master plans for the development and rehabilitation of four major river basins.

DENR administrative Services Director Nanette Rapisura [illegible], also vice chair of the department's bids and awards committee (BAC), has called for tenders for the contract.

"Applicants have until the end of August to submit eligibility documents, after which the BAC will choose three qualified bidders.

A winning bid will entitle the consulting firm to a contract for the formulation of a master plan, called "Integrated River Basin Management and Development Master Plan," for each of the four river basins, under the supervision of the DENR's River Basin Control Office (RBCO).

The four river basins covered by the contract are Marikina, with an approved budget of P15.5 million; Dalig-Bukaue, P13.6 million; Cagayan de Oro, P13.6 million; and Abra, P13.4 million. The entire contract has an approved budget of P57.1 million.

Degraded over years

The preparation of the master plan is a requirement set by the RBCO, the lead government agency for the integrated planning, management, rehabilitation and development of the country's river basins, which have been degraded over the years through exploitation and deforestation, among other destructive economic activities.

The RBCO is tasked with the development and management of projects involving river basins intended to protect the environment and people against floods and natural disasters.

The Philippines has 421 river basins, 18 of which are considered major. "These basins are considered the lifeblood and driver of the Philippine economy, thus [they] need to be managed sustainably," the RBCO says on its website.

'Pass or fail'

Applications for eligibility will be evaluated based on nondiscretionary "pass-or-fail" criteria in accordance with government procurement laws, according to a memo from Rapisura that calls for tenders.

To qualify, bidders will applicants must meet the criteria and rating system, as follows: applicable experience of the firm (60 percent), job capacity (20 percent), and qualification of officers (20 percent).

The bidding is restricted to consultancies with at least 60-percent interest or outstanding capital stock belonging to Filipino citizens.

The contract will be completed within 18 months, Rapisura said.

Gov't looking to cut down on maid exports in 5 yrs

By Jerry E. Esplanada

THERE MAY be far fewer Filipinos working as domestics around the world in five years.

Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) head Hans Leo Cacdac said the government was seriously considering a "five-year phaseout program" of domestic workers to more than 100 countries worldwide.

Cacdac in an interview said Labor Secretary Rosalinda Baldoz had given him "specific marching orders to look at a five-year phaseout program" on the foreign deployment of household service workers, or HSWs.

"We've been directed by Secretary Baldoz to look into a broader program that will help prospective OFWs decide about other job options aside from being HSWs," Cacdac told the Inquirer.

"It's not a zero-deployment or total phaseout of HSW deployment because there are certain types of domestic work, like in some parts of Europe, that are high-paying and protective. During the five-year period, prospective HSWs would be given other employment options based on their skills other than being domestic helpers," he explained.

The POEA chief asserted that "prospective HSWs, many of whom are professionals like teachers and nurses, can still find better higher paying and less vulnerable jobs here and abroad."

But he hastened to emphasize that "there is nothing shameful about being a maid or a domestic helper."

The HSW phaseout program is "just in the conceptual framework and development stage. Two weeks ago I convened the committee [to] work on the program. Hopefully before the end of the year, we'll be able to finalize the plan. It's better to have a plan than not have one," he said.

Cacdac said the POEA "will needs to look at the hard data. Who are the people who opt for domestic work abroad? What's their educational profile? What are their ages, their gender? Where do they come from, what region or which part of the country?"

Also, "if there are options available here, then we can reach out to other government agencies involved in employment facilitation," he said.

Develop OFWs' skills

"The first step is to identify prospective OFWs' skills, further develop those skills and then move on to the industries through those government agencies," he said.

In the past six years, the Philippines deployed 489,835 HSWs worldwide, POEA records showed.

The figures, however, did not include undocumented OFWs working as domestic helpers in countries like Syria, Lebanon, Israel and Italy, among others.

From 2006 to 2011, the top 10 destinations for HSWs were Hong Kong, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Singapore, Saudi Arabia, Italy, Bahrain, Malaysia and Oman.

Cacdac said the POEA was "making an analysis of our statistical data on the profiles of OFWs employed as domestic helpers."

"They do not represent a majority but their numbers are increasing. I would say one-third of the newly hired. And for the first time in 2011, we hit the 100,000 mark. Usually, they averaged 60,000 to 70,000 a year. But last year, HSWs reached more than 142,000," he said.

Vulnerable occupation

A check with the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (Owwa), a Department of Labor and Employment-attached agency like the POEA, showed that "as of July 31, 2012, a total of 1,251,001 Owwa members were employed as HSWs." Owwa has over 5.03 million members.

According to Cacdac, "something must be done by the government to make sure that everybody knows the realities of working abroad, especially those in a vulnerable occupation like domestic work."

"And that includes setting high standards for the hiring and deployment of HSWs, as well as the protection of their rights," he added.

Asked about the Philippines' image as a maid-exporting nation, Cacdac said: "That is a very sensitive issue."

"We are more concerned about ensuring that all departing OFWs will have legitimate, decent and dignified work abroad—our mandate—plus providing them adequate protection of their rights," he said.

Gawad Kalinga targets Intramuros

Shanty dwellers in Manila's Walled City up for relocation

WELCOME SIEGE A guided tour begins at the gates of Fort Santiago in Intramuros.

By Kristine L. Alave

ESTABLISHED IN 1571, Intramuros used to be Manila's beating heart during the three centuries of Spanish colonial rule, the seat of power where political and economic decisions shaping the fate of Filipinos were made.

But today it is a shadow of its old self, crisscrossed overhead by dangling electric cables and blighted with shanties on the fringes, despite past restoration efforts.

The Intramuros Administration (IA) and Gawad Kalinga (GK) are teaming up to take out more dirt, through a program dubbed "Caring for the Past, Sharing for the Future." The first order of business: Relocate the informal settlers now occupying private and public lands in the 64-hectare Walled City.

In an interview during the program launch on Thursday, GK's Rose Cabrera said the project would involve the relocation of some 5,400 families over the next three years.

A major donor, the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines, has already donated a piece of land in Trece Martires, Cavite province, to host a GK village for some of the residents, said Cabrera, director of GKommunity, a subgroup of Gawad Kalinga focusing on livelihood projects.

The Trece Martires land will be the first "Kalinga Intramuros (KI)" village, she said. The initial plan calls for the setup of at least three KI villages outside Metro Manila, costing P3 million each, to accommodate 300 families, obviously still way below the target.

Cabrera said GK hopes to get more donations soon, as it also

At a private birthday party, a horrible crime was committed. You'd probably think it couldn't happen in a safe, exclusive village or among a small number of guests who know each other—but it did. About 20 individuals were invited business people, night owls, celebrities and royals.

The victim of the crime was talking to another guest when everyone was called to gather around and sing "Happy Birthday" to the celebrator. So he or she placed his/her mobile phone on the dining table to join in.

After the song was sung, the phone was gone. The theft took all of only five minutes. The victim thought someone was playing a joke on him/her, but finally had to accept that his/her phone was gone. Some suggested checking everyone's bags, but this did not yield a positive result.

Theft, petty or major, makes the victim feel violated. This feeling will not go away soon enough.

In this case, the crime also spoilt the spirit of what could've been a great birthday party. The victim had no choice but to chalk it up to experience. Just [illegible] his/her suspects.

Nurturing Nutrition of the Nation

True to its mission of helping nourish Filipinos and support their healthy futures, Wyeth Philippines has partnered with Synergeia to institute nutrition support programs in various schools and communities around the country.

The Wyeth Nurture Nutrition program aims to provide proper nutrition through feeding programs to more than 1,300 Grade 1 students in schools having high reports of malnutrition as endorsed by Synergeia Foundation - particularly in Valenzuela City, Metro Manila; Bohol; Maguindanao; and Talisay, Negros Occidental.

Launched in August 2011, the Nurture Nutrition program was implemented to help alleviate malnutrition in grade 1 students, to help reduce absenteeism and dropout rates of students in the identified schools. As most of the participating students come to school hungry, the Wyeth Nurture Nutrition program provides them with enough nourishment to supplement their required nutrient intake, thus helping them stay in school and perform better in school activities.

Six schools were identified by Synergeia Foundation to participate in the Wyeth Nurture Nutrition Program: Gen. T. De Leon Elementary School in Valenzuela City, Bohol Central Elementary School, Hardy/Datu Teka Primary School, Gadungan Rebendoon Primary School and Kalangan Primary School all located in Bongo Island, Maguindanao and, Domingo B. Jareta Rodriguez Memorial Elementary School in Talisay, Negros Occidental.

In a short span of time, the participating students have started to regularly attend their classes, and an average increase of 1 kilo/2.2lbs has been observed as a result of the feeding program. Moreover, another effect brought by the feeding program was a more active involvement from the community as an increased inflow of parent volunteers and support from the local government to the feeding program was observed.

"We are truly grateful with the kind of support that companies like Wyeth Philippines have extended to our schools" says Dr. Milwida Guevara, Chief Executive Officer of Synergeia Foundation. "With their Nurture Nutrition program, the effects not only are apparent in the physical appearance and school performance of the students, but it has also affected our community which encouraged their active involvement and has also emphasized the correlation of proper nourishment to a child's performance in school," adds Dr. Guevara.

According to the initial results of the Anthropometric Survey in the 2008 National Nutrition Study conducted by the Food and Nutrition Research Institute of the Department of Science and Technology, 26% of children aged 5-10 years old are still underweight. Although a decreased trend in the rate has been observed, it should be noted that this decrease is slow and will take years before the problem of malnutrition in children is eradicated. In relation to school performance, UNESCO emphasized the importance of providing proper nutrition to young students as it affects intellectual development and learning ability. In fact, it was found that children with more adequate diets scored higher on tests compared to those having less adequate nutrition.

"We launched Wyeth Nurture Nutrition as part of our continuing commitment to help nourish children and support their healthy future. Our partnership with Synergeia Foundation allowed us to reach needy school children and provide them with the adequate nutrition they need in order for them to be motivated to attend school and encourage them to perform better in school," said Rafmel Adelado, Wyeth Communications Associate Director.

With the success of the Nurture Nutrition partnership between Wyeth and Synergeia in its first year of activation, it now endeavors to reach more children all over the country. To mark its second year of partnership, Wyeth has launched the Wyeth Threebies promo which extends to the general public the opportunity to help Synergeia provide a glass of milk for a whole school year to more Grade 1 undernourished students in Synergeia supported schools.

The Wyeth Threebies Promo also allows consumers to get instant prizes, and the chance to win in regional raffle draws while they continue to enjoy good nutrition through participating Wyeth milk products such as Enercal Plus, ProMama, Alpha, Bonakid Choco Boost, Bonakid Pre-School, Promil Pre-School and Progress Pre-School Gold.

Promo runs from July 15 to Sept. 15, 2012.

Former 'hippie child' Mitch Valdes will hold a concert–in Holy Land

By [illegible]

She has gone back to church –a place, she says, to touch base and make 'lupasay' internally

ON DEC. 22, Mitch Valdes, singer, actor, funny bone, will have the distinctive honor of being the first Filipino to hold a concert right in Manger Square in the ancient town of Bethlehem.

She will sing beloved Christmas carols like "O Little Town of Bethlehem," and favorite ditties such as "In My Life," by the Beatles.

It will be a one-hour concert in the open, underneath a canopy of twinkling stars. Mitch will make sure to bring along her ever-reliable Minus 1. She will not just sing with her heart.

"God made me a comedienne. I will also entertain," she says. "I will put up a show!"

Bucket list

Her journey all began early last year when ABS-CBN's Tina Monzon-Palma, over live TV, asked her about her "bucket list." Said Mitch, a little wistfully: "I'd love to visit the Holy Land."

Mitch has been all over the world, traveling to mostly off-the-beaten tracks, the adventurer in her exploring the "inner cities" usually avoided by ordinary tourists. A favorite ritual is to sit and sip in sidewalk cafés, just watching the world go by.

"But I've never been there, not the Holy Land," she said.

It was that "bucket list" interview that made it all possible. That led to an invitation by a certified Mitch Valdes fan, Arlene Dagdag, who owns Journeys of Faith Inc., a travel

How to protect and grow your nest egg–advice for average senior Joes and Jolinas (like me)

Stick to what you know (SDA? Treasury bills?)... Befriend your private banker. But–simple prudence–don't give him or her carte blanche to invest your money

Contributor

YOU'VE PROBABLY heard Suze Orman's mantra: Pay yourself first! Her point was, you need to save and invest wisely because you have obligations to meet, emergencies to cover and the future to provide for.

Well, seniors, the future has arrived, you're retired, and you will still be spending, but for different reasons than when your nest wasn't empty. Hopefully, your chicks have finally flown, you're free of debt and have accumulated a nice little nest egg—one that, thankfully, has the potential to hatch into [illegible].

That egg, though, does demand your attention. Why? Because that nest egg will make it possible for you to travel before your knees buckle—you can see I have my priorities

GOD BLESS

"I am the resurrection and life. He who believes in Me will live, even though he dies; and whoever believes in Me will never die."

"What I want for the Philippines is for the time to come when poverty is an insignificant problem, and that when it comes to choosing the leaders, the people will realize that they have the true power. I hope that the time will come when the Filipino is truly free, free to choose the leaders he wants and not bound by pressing needs."

- Sec. Jesse Robredo

The Philippine Health Insurance Corporation (PhilHealth) is one with the nation in mourning for the loss of a great man who served the public wholeheartedly. The Honorable Secretary and PhilHealth Board Member Jesse Robredo is undoubtedly an "epitome of effective, ethical and empowering leadership in our government." He fought for and believed in the people. He stood up for his principles at all costs. He made us believe in government once more. He nourished a wonderful vision that someday, each and every Filipino will be empowered and liberated from poverty. May his vision and actions continue to live.

At PhilHealth, we believe that the best way to honor the memory of Sec. Robredo is to continue fighting for the reforms that we have started.

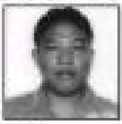

Just as he supported the LGU-Sponsored Program and encouraged fellow leaders to do the same, we promise to go an extra mile to keep the millions of our underprivileged brothers and sisters enrolled into the National Health Insurance Program. We will not stop toiling until that day when universal health care is a reality; when each and every Filipino is indeed empowered through health.

We would also like to extend our condolences to the family of Sec. Robredo. Please know that the PhilHealth family and the rest of the nation is behind you.
